

Association for Welding, Fabrication, Training & Education

By William Roffey

AWFTE is a membership association specifically for welder training and fabrication professionals in the education and training sector. The AWFTE enables management and staff of colleges and training establishments to keep abreast of current national, European and international trends and developments relevant to the sector. The talk will cover the history, purpose and activities of the AWFTE.

Bill Roffey served a four-year indentured apprenticeship as a Shipyard Welder at Rosyth and Chatham Royal Naval Dockyards. He has worked as a Welder, Foreman Welder and as a Welding Instructor. Bill spent time in the Middle East training welding operatives for the oil industry. After some ten years in various training roles in the Middle East he returned to the UK and joined the College of North West London (CNWL) as a Welding Lecturer and later running the Fabrication, Welding and Mechanical Engineering department as the Curriculum Manager, since his retirement from CNWL he has been delivering training for compressed gases to BCGA Codes of Practice 7 and 47 and acts as a Welding Coordinator for a construction company. Since 2010 Bill has been a member of the Management Committee for the Association for Welding and Fabrication Training and Education (AWFTE).
